

The Law

Your organization must comply with laws and regulations, requiring that it protect certain information when it is discarded.

An increasing number of laws actually require organizations to shred or face steep fines.

At the federal level, HIPAA (healthcare) and Gramm-Leach-Bliley (financial) require specific physical safeguards, such as shredding, to meet compliance. Stiff penalties could result!

Your Customers

Whether your customers are consumers concerned about Identity Theft and Privacy, or companies concerned with protecting trade information, you are entrusted with information that they consider to be extremely confidential.

In fact, whether you know it or not, you have an "implied contract" to protect that information simply based on the fact that you are collecting the data to conduct business.

They have the legal right to expect you to take every precaution to protect it, including shredding it before it is discarded.

Your Public Image

Dumpster Diving has become Investigative Journalism 101. With all the privacy compliance laws, it is the first place reporters look when trying to grab a quick headline.

Privacy is the newest consumer awareness issue. Confidential information in your dumpster is an easy source of sensational headlines.

Your Employees

ding before it is discarded.

Insurance records, employment applications, time cards, health records, accident reports and attendance records are examples of information that

Employees (past and present) have a legal right to have their personal information protected by shred-

cards, health records, accident reports and attendance records are examples of information that legally must be protected.

Corporate Ethics

In this day and age, it is very important that your organization exhibits the highest ethical standards.

Casually discarding company information, whether in the form of an individual's personal information, or company trade information, shows a callous disregard for customer and shareholder welfare. It exposes customers to the threat of Identity Theft and other fraud. It also risks your company losing its trade secret protections in court.

Your Trade Information Rights The courts have demonstrated many times that they will not recognize trade information protections if a company doesn't take every step to protect the information themselves. Casual disposal of information has been the basis for courts to deny trade information rights, which otherwise would have been enforceable.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that you forfeit the right of ownership to discarded information.

The Moral of the Story:

If you don't protect it like trade information, the courts won't either.

Why Use An Information Destruction Contractor?

- Employees are more productive when focused on their core responsibilities
- Safety even small machines could cause injury if they grab clothing or accessories
- Reduced capital and employment expenditures
- Employees are most likely to realize the value of discarded company info
- Company info such as payroll, legal and employment issues, and correspondence should not be exposed to most employees
- In-house shredding will not handle large volumes and may prompt employees to circumvent the destruction process

Why Use A NAID Member?

As part of the only organization dedicated to increasing the security and ethics of the information destruction industry, NAID MEMBERS are bound to a strict code of conduct.

Why Not Just Recycle It?

While NAID MEMBERS recycle everything they can after they destroy it, recycling alone does not establish the necessary requirements of information destruction, such as:

- how it was destroyed
- where it was destroyed
- who destroyed it
- when it was destroyed
- legal chain of custody
- fiduciary obligations

Legal & Regulatory Violations caused by NOT Destroying Info before Discarding

Direct Violation

Conditional Violation

Account Data
Banking Info & Docs
Brainstorming Notes
Cancelled Checks
Copies of Checks
Customers' Addresses
Customers' Names
Drafts of Contracts
Drafts of Letters
Drafts of Proposals
Education Records

Drafts of Contracts
Drafts of Letters
Drafts of Proposals
Education Records
Employee Info
Insurance Info
Internal Memos
Loan Info
Market Analysis
Medical Info
Mis-Aligned Forms
Mis-Printed Copies

Obsolete Contracts
Obsolete Records
Patient Billing Info
Patient Names
Payroll Info
Phone Logs
Phone Messages
Purchase Orders
Sales Call Reports
Sales Info
Shipping Data
Soc. Sec. Numbers

Supplier Info

Training Info

Visitor Logs

